

Christoph Schuseil

Christoph Schuseil is a coach, organisational and career consultant. He is the managing director of the consulting firm Schuseil + Leven Braunschweig and has been self-employed since 2007.

Previously, he worked as an architect in the automotive industry, healthcare and real estate sectors, as well as a research assistant at the Technical University of Braunschweig. During this time, he gained a wide range of experience in the areas of human resources management, personnel and organisational development, and quality management. While working, he completed the continuing education programme 'Personnel Development' at the Technical University of Braunschweig, training as a 'Systemic Consultant in Organisations' at the Institute for Systemic Consulting in Wiesloch, and continuing education in 'Triadic Career Counselling' at the University of Applied Sciences in Hanover.

Christoph Schuseil is a systemic coach and organisational consultant, certified career advisor and authorised trainer for the JPP personality profile.

His areas of expertise are: career coaching, weighing up different career paths and orientations, balancing work and private life, developing personal positioning and profile development, coaching executives, shaping leadership and organisational culture.

References: TU Braunschweig, University of Kiel, University of Hamburg, Leuphana University, University of Göttingen, Sigmund Freud University Berlin, DLR e.V., Fraunhofer Society, Lower Saxony Police Force, Braunschweig Municipal Hospital, Lower Saxony State Forestry Commission.